

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT COURSE ON TAXATION

In collaboration with Carleton University's Centre for Governance and Public Management, the Parliamentary Centre is offering a certificate course on taxation in a federal state, with a specific focus on the Canadian tax system and its administration. The course can be tailored to each trainee's needs and interests, while providing the practical tools that can easily be adjusted to a local context.

This course will offer parliamentarians, parliamentary staff and actors interacting with them unique opportunities for peer-to-peer engagement and knowledge exchanges with active members of the Canadian parliament, representatives from Canada's taxation authorities, expert scholars from the Centre for Governance and Public Management at Carleton University as well as experts from the Parliamentary Centre.

The focus of the course includes:

- + Overview of the tax system in Canada, while providing an international comparison to other countries with established tax systems, such as the United States and the United Kingdom
- + Overview of the legal framework for effective tax remittance and new ways of raising taxes
- + Tax agreements between the various levels of government in Canada and mechanisms of revenue collection and redistribution
- + Enhancing revenue collection and remittances
- + Introduction to resource taxation at the federal and provincial levels in Canada
- + Effective tax collection mechanisms and practical ways of successfully curbing tax evasion/avoidance, which can ultimately lead to stronger tax compliance
- + The Canadian courts role in settling tax related disputes with residents and corporations in Canada
- + Innovative measures for bringing the informal sector into the tax net
- + Exploring the relationship between tax institutions and the Canadian Parliament.

Sign up today.

Contact the Parliamentary Centre:

T +1 613 237 0143

E pdcourse@parlcent.org

W parlcent.org

The Parliamentary Centre is a Canadian non-partisan, non-profit organization with over 45 years experience in supporting parliaments worldwide to better serve the people they represent

The Centre for Governance and Public Management is a research centre at Carleton University, mobilizing knowledge and practice on public sector and public management reform in transitional and developing countries